In the end he advised that if an outdoor space had been made to keep diners warm instead of providing a better airflow, that concern is a concern. The dining room is safer than indoor dining due to its greater air circulation. Dine only with people in your family or a Social bubble. Photo Courtesy: NOAM GALAI / Getty Images Some spots are investing in heated igloo, curtains with sliding walls, hot cloths and fire seats to help customers stay comfortable at the open all year. Over 110,000 restaurants and bars have closed at some point in 2020 - temporarily or permanently & #39; due to the pandemic, and countless others have tried to survive by reopening the open activities following the local guidelines on maintaining social distances . In addition to improved sanitary facilities, temperature controls and spaced tables, some restaurants have set up shops on sidewalks and courtyards to attract customers and keep them safe. The risk is higher high when the space of a capsule is restricted, however. Health experts explain that the virus weakens in the movement of the air, then more circulation of the air is better. & #39;I think big tents with a top and open sides can still be called to the outside. But eating at the open is sure? So, for this reason, the risk is decidedly lower in an open environment, "explained the expert in infectious diseases Dr. Rekha Murthy. The CDC note that you should continue to wear an appropriate mask and practice physical distances, particularly in public spaces or when visiting a house where people have not been completely vaccinated. This means that you should avoid the crowd and poorly ventilated spaces, both more likely to meet in a restaurant or bar. Attelites at the lowest risk activities: Drive-through, delivery, takeaway and collection from the sidewalk. Eating in your favorite restaurant can help you feel closer to normality, except that the pandemic has thrown the restaurant industry in chaos. Despite these additional measures, restaurants have implemented, the CDC is still worried about spreading virus when people eat at the establishments. Because health experts are worried about the outside Dentalthough, the Covid-19 transmission is less likely to occur in external settings, the risk is not & #39; < T zero. This makes spacious pods and tends more suitable for restaurants when time turns cold and wet. Despite these recommendations for customers to stay safe, guests can still capture the virus. Foto Cortesy: Smith Collection / Gado / Getty Images Dining out is also potentially dangerous because you have to remove the face mask to eat or drink around the others who do not wear face coverings, and this increases the probability of transmission. When there are no limits on the seat capacity and the tables are not spaced at least 6 feet away. Wear the maximum mask as much as possible, even when starting from 6 feet from other diners or when they don't consume anything. In the hottest climates and sunnier days, the shadow protection is necessary for comfort and sun protection. More from Ask.com Air can still circulate freely in those environments, & #39; - gloster said. The highest risk? However, the CDC has the contour of the actions, customers can take to reduce their possibilities to contract or spread the virus. Keeping the hot diner is hospitable, but may not keep them safe. As reported by the CDC to September, & #39; - "The results with the results of the positive tests SARS-COV-2 were about twice the odds of having reported to dine in a restaurant compared to those Negative results of the SARS-COV-2 test. & #39; - if you are fully vaccinated, the guidelines remain somewhat similar. Wash your hands or use a hand disinfectant containing at least 60% alcohol during insertion and reduction of the establishment. And, either in a restaurant or on You will still want to avoid medium and large gatherings. For example, the Minnesota & #39; s 99 restaurant has installed high heated igloo 7 feet with floors holding hot space. The CoC recommends that it is good to visit other people completely vaccinated and low risk in private environments without the need to wear a mask and that it is good to travel nationally and internationally without the need for quarantine or test. Do not choose self-service catering options due to shared tools and other very touched surfaces. The risk increases when seats are available on site and at the outside. The best way to protect everyone and support restaurants during a pandemic? Avoid places that do not require staff or customers to wear facial coatings. Coatings.
